- NOTES: 1) For the "Valid Date Range" category, not all months and years within the range necessarily have a complete data archive.
2) Stations are grouped as a single name when various station names for the same basic location have been used. The single name (without any geographic distance, number, or other description) is simply shown and the comprehensive valid date ranges for all of the stations are combined.
3) * Station that is missing most of the data for the valid date range but is included in this table list due to the short time between freezes.

NOTES: 1) The Growing Season counts the calendar-year days between temperature readings of 32°F. (the last seasonal reading prior to July 1st and the first reading for July 1st and later).
 2) The stations chosen are those with Growing Seasons with fewer than 130 days. The values shown are the shortest for these specific locations; each location may have other seasons with fewer days than other stations on the list but are not included in the table, above. Example: Deer Park's three shortest freeze-free periods were 31 days in 1909, 54 days in 1898, and 64 days in 1895 but only the year 1909 with 31 days is portrayed as it is the shortest growing season.
 3) The COOP/River Forecast Station at New Germany, covering the period June 1972-April 1992, had a growing season of just 22 days in 1988 (32 deg. readings on June 8th and July 1st); 89 Days in 1975 (32 deg. readings on June 7th & Sept 5th) and 97 days in 1986 (32 deg. readings on June 3rd & Sept. 9th) but the validity and siting of the temperature equipment cannot be verified.
